

"I want to be a grown up"

Name:

Managing in the current society requires an early development of several communication and interaction skills necessary to survive emotionally and professionally in their future adult stage.

For several reasons, many children might not have the minimum resources to properly develop in this aspect. Social skills provide means for children so they can give and receive positive social rewards which, at the same time, lead them to increase their social involvement, creating more positive relationships and making them capable of solving social problems.
